PWQ—a feminist journal that aims to encourage and develop a body of knowledge about the psychology of women—publishes empirical research, critical reviews, theoretical articles, and invited book reviews. Unusual findings in studies not otherwise warranting a full article may be written as brief reports. Only articles germane to the psychology of women will be considered, including sex-related comparisons, psychobiological factors, sexuality, social and cognitive processes, lifespan role development and change, career choice and training, management and performance variables, education, discrimination, harassment and violence, psychological distress and well-being, and therapeutic processes. Topics related to minority and cross-cultural issues are welcome. These suggestions are not meant to be exhaustive, but are intended to guide the investigator when considering the appropriateness of an article to the psychology of women.
